Fire Department Reminder: Change Clocks, Change Batteries!

Is your life worth more than a 9-volt battery? This is the question Boulder City Fire Department officials are asking as part of the annual effort to get people to replace their smoke-detector batteries when the time changes. This year, daylight-saving time will end November 3 at 2 a.m. "The cost and effort involved in changing your batteries is a small price to pay to prevent a fire-related tragedy," explained Boulder City Interim Fire Chief Steve Walton, "and the time change is a good reminder." Walton explained that should a fire start while the power is out, having a smoke detector hard-wired into a home's electrical service is useless if the battery does not have a sufficient charge left to operate the unit. Smoke detectors are especially important during the hours when people sleep. "The smell of smoke won't always wake you," Walton noted. "The only thing that will reliably wake you in the event of a fire is a smoke detector." The Boulder City Fire Department will help residents who are in need or physically incapable of changing their own batteries. To schedule a battery-replacement appointment, call (702) 293-9228.

City Council Creates Ad-Hoc Pool Committee

In an effort to determine how to proceed in repairing or replacing the City's Municipal Pool, City Council asked for citizen volunteers to serve on a Municipal Pool Ad-Hoc Committee. At its meeting September 24, Council appointed seven community members to serve with Mayor Kiernan McManus and Councilman James Howard Adams on the nine-member committee. McManus will serve as Chairman and Adams will be Vice-Chair. Those appointed are Chad Anderson, Sara Carroll, Matt Di Teresa, Judith Hoskins, Carol Jeffries, Martin Rihel and Terry Stevens. They were selected for their knowledge of municipal pools and/or swimming events. The Committee will meet at least once a month through November 2020, unless extended by the City Council. The meetings will be open to the public.
