

Boulder City Offers Weekly COVID-19 Testing

The number of COVID-19 cases and hospitalizations is on the rise across the nation, with 66 reported cases in Boulder City as of July 4. The City of Boulder City wants employees and residents to remain informed and protected in order to safeguard our residents from this deadly pandemic.

Employees are encouraged to take advantage of free weekly COVID-19 testing which will be provided by Fire Department paramedics. Testing will be available each Wednesday between 8:00 a.m. and 12:00 noon at the Fire Department, 1101 Elm Street.

In addition, Boulder City, Boulder City Hospital and the Southern Nevada Health District plan to offer community-wide testing, by appointment, at the Fire Department on Tuesday mornings through July from 8:00 a.m. until 11:00 a.m. "We are doing what residents of Boulder City have always done: looking out for each other," said Boulder City Mayor Kiernan McManus. "Testing is important as some people who have COVID-19 may not show symptoms but can still spread this highly contagious virus. Help keep your family, friends, co-workers and those that provide service to us safe and healthy."

New nasal swab tests are shorter and far less invasive than the earlier tests. Patients must provide a name, address, and contact information in order to get the free testing. Results take about one week. No doctors orders are required. The tests determine if you currently have the virus; they are not blood tests to determine if you have antibodies.
